

ABSTRACT

In the borders of a computer-aided presentation method for a 3D subject, a 2D basic image of a subject and a 2D basic presentation of a 3D volume data set of the subject are determined by a computer and momentarily output as images via an output system. The basic image and the basic presentation are thereby simultaneously output by the computer, but spatially separate from one another.